The Right Dispute Resolution Tools for the Best Outcomes

It's time to explore and consider Mediation and Arbitration

Overview

In business, trust and relationships are important. However, differences can arise. Going to court is the default to get a third party to decide who is the winner in a dispute. However, this can alter relationships and make the news. Arbitration is an alternative as it can be curated, remain confidential with favorable outcomes. Mediation has been around for centuries and supported by the United Nations Convention on International Settlement Agreements Resulting from Mediation 2018 (i.e., the Singapore Convention on Mediation). It is a confidential mechanism and the parties can decide on a win-win solution.

A well-drafted dispute resolution clause that incorporates mediation can help de-escalate a dispute and strengthen bonds rather than divide, while preserving the option to arbitrate as a last resort.

Dentons Rodyk, Dentons Lee and the Korean Commercial Arbitration Board will share how mediation and alternative dispute resolution can benefit your business through presentations and a distinguished panel of expertise.
