Vietnam is undergoing the most significant legal and institutional reforms to its dispute resolution framework in decades. These reforms, include the following:

- Government restructuring
- Court reorganization
- Creation of new International Financial Centres (IFCs) with specialized courts and arbitration institutions

These reforms are poised to reshape the enforcement landscape for arbitral awards.

This seminar will explore Vietnam's recent arbitration reforms and their implications for dispute resolution, including the establishment of new IFCs and changes in award enforcement. It will help contractors and investors understand how these developments affect disputes and enforcement in Vietnam. The session will also compare the treatment of liquidated damages and multi-tiered dispute resolution clauses under Vietnamese, English, and Korean law.
